“Problemas de Historia Moderna. Esoterismo rosacruz y ciencia en la Europa occidental del siglo XVII”

I. Fundamentación-Objetivos.

Han pasado exactamente 400 años de la publicación, en territorios germanos, del Chymische Hochzeit Christiani Rosencreutz -1616- (o Bodas químicas de Christian Rosencreutz), continuación éste, de otros dos célebres textos (Fama Fraternitatis -1614-, Confesio Fraternitatis -1615).

Esa tríada, así conformada, comenzó a difundir por Europa el llamado movimiento Rosacruz. Los agentes vinculados con esta corriente específica, si se apropiaban de objetos, prácticas y representaciones esotéricas de la centuria anterior (tradiciones herméticas, magia astral, cábala cristiana, magia natural y, especialmente, astrología renacentista y alquimia paracélsica), promovieron a su vez un entramado cultural particular que se expandió durante todo el siglo XVII e, inclusive, se proyectó al XVIII (adoptando desde entonces nuevos horizontes de significación en el contexto ilustrado).

Frances Yates la llamó “fase iluminista rosacruz” (1972) y la vinculó al proceso histórico que se nominaba por entonces como “revolución científica” (Rupert Hall, 1954) -y que luego se definió como “origen de la ciencia moderna” (Rossi, 1998)-. Aunque aquella tesis yatesiana sobre los rosacrucianos y la ciencia fue ya en muchos aspectos superada por la crítica especializada posterior -que añadió numerosos estudios de caso en los últimos veinte años (Edighofer, 1995; Shakelford, 1996; Akerman, 1998; Dickson, 1998; Khan, 2006; Willard, 2014; Tilton, 2015, entre otros)-, los debates continúan.

Así, para el presente ciclo lectivo, este seminario de investigación propone, desde el enfoque histórico-cultural, abordar uno de los problemas históricos centrales de la Europa Moderna: las relaciones históricas entre esoterismo rosacruz y ciencia moderna en el siglo XVII, abordando sus antecedentes, casos puntuales y polémicas actuales.

Atendiendo las características del contexto histórico (redescubrimiento de los Antiguos, reformas religiosas y guerras de religión, expansión ultramarina, transición del feudalismo al capitalismo, surgimiento de los absolutismos políticos); el objetivo central de la propuesta es que los estudiantes de la carrera de Historia se inicien en las prácticas de elaboración de un discurso historiográfico a partir de lectura crítica de bibliografía -clásica y actualizada de mediana y elevada complejidad.

Para ello, se examinarán los términos actuales del debate académico sobre el tema, y, al mismo tiempo, los casos puntuales que revelan con intensidad las cuestiones principales que este vasto problema plantea, merced, sobre todo, al abordaje minucioso de fuentes primarias representativas.

IV. Requisitos.

Preferentemente, que los asistentes hayan cursado Historia Medieval e Historia Moderna y posean capacidad de lectura de textos en idioma inglés.

V. Asistencia. Actividades planificadas. Criterios de Evaluación. Promoción.

Conforme a la reglamentación vigente, los asistentes deben cumplir con una asistencia no inferior al 80% de las clases programadas.

El seminario se desarrollará durante el transcurso del segundo cuatrimestre del año académico 2016, en sesiones semanales de trabajo de 4 horas.

Las actividades planificadas se asentarán fundamentalmente sobre la base de dos estrategias:

a) cada sesión se basará en un cronograma de lecturas obligatorias previas por parte de los asistentes y en exposiciones magistrales del docente a cargo durante las primeras dos horas (acompañadas periódicamente por la exhibición de imágenes en powerpoint y, en una clase específica, la proyección del film Giordano Bruno –Ponti, 1973).

b) en las dos horas siguientes de cada sesión, se organizarán presentaciones críticas de textos por parte de los alumnos -para su debate en general-. Se considerará una buena presentación aquella que se desarrolle durante 15 a 20 minutos y que contenga los siguientes elementos:

- explice algún tipo de información adicional que identifique al autor.
- precise en qué contexto historiográfico se enmarca el autor.
- efectúe –con palabras propias- una síntesis del argumento del texto, exponiendo de tal forma sus líneas directrices que aquél que no lo hubiese leído se encuentre en condiciones de entenderlo.
- seleccione -y explice- dos o tres citas significativas del texto que permitan comprender las intenciones del autor.
- efectúe una evaluación crítica del texto, a la luz del resto de la bibliografía abordada en el seminario.
- emita una opinión personal sobre: complejidad, relación con la/s fuente/s, pertinencia respecto del tema discutido, etc.

La cursada del seminario se aprobará si se han cumplido los requisitos mínimos de asistencia y se ha participado activamente en las presentaciones críticas de textos bajo las condiciones mencionadas precedentemente.

La promoción del seminario se alcanzará con la aprobación de un trabajo monográfico final de un máximo de 20 páginas de extensión a presentarse después de finalizada la cursada dentro del plazo establecido en la reglamentación vigente.

La monografía final desarrollará un discurso historiográfico centrado en el análisis de alguna de las fuentes señaladas en este programa (que será de elección individual de cada asistente pero con acuerdo del docente a cargo) y deberá incluir:

- una revisión crítica de la bibliografía pertinente utilizada y su descripción ajustada a la fuente.
- un análisis pormenorizado de la fuente seleccionada en relación a alguno de los problemas abordados durante el transcurso del seminario.
- una discusión de los problemas metodológicos enfrentados.
- utilización de citas bibliográficas a pie de página y listado de bibliografía consultada al final, conforme los modelos académicos convencionales de redacción de textos.
